1. Siebel Aircraft Works

In late October 1946 a Siebel test pilot flew a Russian general from K8then (D95) to Moscow, and thence to Batum, where the general visited a settlement which had been prepared for approximately 2,000 Siebel employees from Halle. Work on this project, which consists of small bungalows, two cinemas and a vaudeville house, is alleged to have started about one year before. The deportees were to work in a jet fighter factory near Batum.

2. Heinkel Aircraft Works

According to statements made in November by Soviet officers in charge of the dismantling of the Heinkel plant at Marienehe, most of the assembly halls were to be re-erected in Murmansk. Former Heinkel engineers submitted a letter to their Soviet opposite numbers declaring they could not guarantee that the halls, in their present state, could be used successfully in Murmansk. At the time of their construction, it was not expected that the roofs would have to support a heavy snow load.

The furniture of the deportees has arrived, and each family has been allotted a central-heated two- or three-room apartment with bath. They are also well supplied with food.
